

Future Scenes of the Dairy Industry

“Today, farmers achieve an output 250 percent greater than what they did from the same inputs in 1930. And as we’ve gotten more efficient on the farm, fewer Americans have stayed there – today, farmers constitute just two percent of the population, down from 22 percent eighty years ago”

There will be a lot larger dairies in the future years and a lot less small farms. Larger farms can operate more efficiently and can support large quantities of people. These pictures and scenes will be seen a lot more than pictures of smaller dairies.
